

THE ULTIMATE NUGGET PROJECT PRESERVING OUR HISTORY SECURING OUR FUTURE

The Clock Shop and Deadwood History's Adams Museum have partnered to create a unique piece of history: the Potato Creek Johnny 2 gold nugget (PCJ2). MELDING HISTORY & GOLD

The solid gold PCJ2 melds the mold and gold of the two largest nuggets discovered in South Dakota's Black Hills: placer gold taken from the site of the recently-discovered Icebox Nugget was poured into a mold made from the famous Potato Creek Johnny Nugget to create a completely new piece of history.

Potato Creek Johnny's gold nugget is considered the single-most valuable artifact of Black Hills history in existence. In 1929, Potato Creek Johnny found the nugget and later sold the leg-shaped piece, weighing 7.346 troy ounces, to pioneer businessman W.E. Adams. In 2011, the nugget was appraised at $500,000.

PRESERVE OUR HISTORY – SECURE OUR FUTURE: THE ULTIMATE NUGGET PROJECT

The stunning PCJ2 was created by Black Hills Bronze and will be auctioned by Dakota Plains Auctions with all proceeds benefitting Deadwood History's Adams Museum and the Wounded Warrior Project. The Adams Museum, the Black Hills' oldest history museum, explores Deadwood's raucous past and features the stories of legends Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane. The Wounded Warrior Project has a mission to foster the most successful, well-adjusted generation of wounded military veterans in America's history.
